When we think of famous inventors we usually think of men, people like Alexander Graham Bell and Thomas Edison. But, when we talk about many of things that make our life easier today, we find that they were invented by women. For example, the car was invented by a man, but a woman called Mary Anderson, who in 1903 solved one of the biggest problems of driving, invented windshield (wipers 1) to help the drivers to see when it is raining or snowing. In 1956, Bette Nesmith was working as a secretary. She used to make typing mistakes, then she had a brilliant idea, which was to use a white liquid to paint over mistakes. Her invention is called white-out. In 1966, Stephanie Kwolek invented Kevlar, a special material that was very light, but stronger than metal, this material is used to make bullet-proof vests to (protect 2) police officers, soldiers, and politicians all over the world.(Her 3) invention saved thousands of lives.

Flu, short for influenza, is a virus (that 3) passes easily from person to person. Every year, millions of people (miss 1) work and school because of the seasonal flu. Seasonal flu exists worldwide. Usually the flu season is in the winter months, but in warm climates, the flu occurs during the rainy season. Flu symptoms include fever, cough, sore throat, body aches, headaches, chills and fatigue. These symptoms usually show up quickly, developing within three to six hours of exposure to the virus. With the flu, you may start the day feeling fine, only to end up feeling (terrible 2) a few hours later. The flu is especially dangerous for children aged two and under, adults over 65 years old, and people in poor health. These people may not be able to fight the virus and can become extremely sick. Therefore, scientists must develop new vaccines each year. It can take six months to a year to develop these vaccines. For some viruses, there is no vaccine, and flu is one of these viruses.

Part two: A) Read the following passage then choose the best answer to the questions below: (2) points each

Dolphins are aquatic mammals; they are warm blooded. They have excellent vision and they can see whatever is close to them. There are 43 different species of dolphins, 38 of them are oceanic dolphins, which most of the people know, and five species of river dolphins. The families included as dolphins are oceanic and river dolphins. Unlike fish, that breath through gills, dolphins breath air using lungs, they have to (reach 2) the surface of the ocean to breath. The skin color of dolphins is grayish-blue and their skin is very sensitive. They have up to 100 teeth. They eat fishes and shrimps. Dolphins have a reputation for being friendly, they are graceful swimmers and playful (leaping 1) out of the water- possibly for fun. They are similar to humans in smartness and always save and rescue them from sharks, help drowning sailors, guide boats through rough waters. And because of what have mentioned above about dolphins, people love and care about (them 3) a lot.

If you are in (strong 1) pain, nothing else matters. Pain of a tooth can dominate all other sensations. Sometimes people who suffer from constant or frequent pain, the experience is unbearable and can sometimes even lead to suicide. Pain is also part of the way your body respond to conditions that could damage (it 3). Unlike other sensations, pain can arise from various kinds of causes, such as a very loud sound, a heavy pressure, a knife wound, or an extremely bright light. Pain serves as an (essential 2) defense signal that warns us of potential harm, and tells us to get treatment for illness and injury. Many people can learn to control pain by psychological techniques, such as hypnosis or deep relaxation. Others find relief by taking a placebo, a fake drug given in the place of real drugs. Its effectiveness, of course, depends on the person believing that they are getting real medicine. Apparently, the expectation of pain relief is enough to cause the brain to release its own painkilling substances.

Part two: A) Read the following passage then choose the best answer to the questions below: (2) points each

Our minds and bodies (gather 1) information in different ways and from all around us: seeing, hearing and doing. Then our brain process that information, organize (it 3) and make connections to things we already know. This process can also work in different ways: Do we think in pictures or words? Do we (remember 2) details or big pictures? When we are trying to learn, it helps to know how our brain works. How do we best gather and organize information? Different people have different learning styles. For example, one person might struggle with written information but understand it immediately in an illustration. Another person might have problems with the pictures, but not the written text. Psychologists have identified some basic learning styles. Linguistics, learning by using language skills. Visual learning by seeing what they are learning. Interpersonal, learning by working with others. Intrapersonal, learning by associating new information directly with experience. Kinesthetic, learning by movement and physical activities. Eventually, you will often experience situations that do not match your learning style. If you know what your strengths are, you can develop your own learning style to balance your weakness for a more successful experience.

The text is mainly talking about..... styles.

Part two: A) Read the following passage then choose the best answer to the questions below: (2) points each

A volcano is an opening in Earth's crust. Volcanoes can change Earth's surface in just a few minutes. Melted rocks and hot gases (erupt 1) through this opening. These materials create a landform when they pile up around the opening. Where Earth's crust is weak, liquid rock may push its way to the surface and erupt as lava. Lava is hot, melted rock that comes from a volcano. Some lava coming from a volcano is thick and moves slowly. Thick lava usually shoots out of the top of volcanoes. This lava can build tall mountains layer by layer. Lava can also be thin. Thin lava moves quickly. It can cover large areas of land before it cools and hardens new rocks. Lava deserts have been formed from lava that moves quickly. Volcanoes can be very dangerous, (they 3) often (destroy 2) what is near them, but they can also create new landforms.

Flu, short for influenza, is a virus (that 3) passes easily from person to person. Every year, millions of people (miss 1) work and school because of the seasonal flu. Seasonal flu exists worldwide. Usually the flu season is in the winter months, but in warm climates, the flu occurs during the rainy season. Flu symptoms include fever, cough, sore throat, body aches, headaches, chills and fatigue. These symptoms usually show up quickly, developing within three to six hours of exposure to the virus. With the flu, you may start the day feeling fine, only to end up feeling (terrible 2) a few hours later. The flu is especially dangerous for children aged two and under, adults over 65 years old, and people in poor health. These people may not be able to fight the virus and can become extremely sick. Therefore, scientists must develop new vaccines each year. It can take six months to a year to develop these vaccines. For some viruses, there is no vaccine, and flu is one of these viruses.

Part two: A) Read the following passage then choose the best answer to the questions below: (2) points each

The shape of earth is always changing. These changes have many (different 2) causes. Some come from forces below ground. These forces can cause a volcano, an earthquake, or a tsunami. And afterwards, the land will look very different. Changes also happen because of the weather. Many years of rain, for example, can wash away dirt and change the shape of rocks. In the desert, the wind blows the sand and changes the shape of hills. Water can also change the shape of the land. For example, a river can make a deep cut into a mountain. At the (seaside 1), waves can move the shore inland. New technology has helped scientists learn more about the earth. For example, they now understand what a volcano is. (They 3) also know what kinds of rocks and chemicals usually come out of a volcano. Scientists have also learned a lot about earthquakes. However, there are still some important things that scientists don't know about the earth. For example, they can't say when a volcano or an earthquake will happen. Eventually, we are sure that scientists will keep on studying and researching till they get the answers for all the unknown natural events.
